MORRIS COUNTY PROUD TO BE STIGMA-FREE

THE STIGMA FREE ZONE NEWS OF NJ

Bringing the Mental Health Conversation to New Jersey

We report on a volunteer initiative of organizations, nonprofits, schools, libraries, hospitals, First Responders, and houses of worship working independently or with local government to make NJ free from the stigma of mental illness.

Anyone can form a SFZ Task Force to educate. Just pledge to "do something about mental illness."

THE MORRIS COUNTY STIGMA FREE ZONES ARE CHUGGING ALONG!

By Cynthia Chazen

Morris County has participated in the SFZ Communities Initiative for several years and to date boasts 34 municipalities taking part to eradicate the stigma associated with mental illness & substance use disorders. Groups are raising awareness by creating communities where individuals are supported in achieving wellness and recovery.

The Morris County SFZ has attracted strong leadership from government, mental health non-profits and celebrities, among others. Past SFZ events included a 2016 presentation by Chief Assistant Prosecutor, Brad Seabury, who is one of the county's leading experts on opiates and addiction, and an April 2017 presentation featured former Boston Celtics player, Chris Herren, who overcame a heroin addiction

This fall, the Mental Health Association of Essex and Morris installed an art exhibit in Newark Penn Station in partnership with NJ Transit. A series of portraits of persons, some with with lived experience of mental illness and some without, are hanging in the station. There is no indication which person is suffering. The artwork by Parisian graffiti artist "JR," evokes many questions in the mind of the observer. MHA CEO, Bob Davison, and curator, Renee Folzenlogen (who is also an art therapist at MHA), titled the exhibit "We're in This Together." It remains on display until mid-December, when it will be moved to the Secaucus Junction station.

The Morris County Mental Health and Addiction Coalition's 1st Annual Legislative Breakfast was held on Oct. 26, 2018, and attracted heavy-hitters from the world of mental health advocacy. Paul Gionfriddo, President and CEO of Mental Health America, joined Freeholder Kathryn DeFillippo and Assemblyman Anthony Bucco in compelling presentations. Sheriff James Gannon and Jeff Richardson, President of the National Council for Behavioral Health, were also featured speakers.

The Morris County SFZ website offers event links and community toolkits on developing stigma free zones (See Quicklinks, below). Sign their pledge today!

Morris County Leaders Speak Out Against Stigma

"The goal is to bring our entire county community together in a united effort to help people seek recovery, without fear of stigma or reprisal." Morris County Freeholder Director, Doug Cabana

"Mendham Township is pleased to join so many other towns in promoting mental health and encouraging a Stigma-Free community. Mental illness is a serious public health concern." Mendham Township Mayor Rich Diegnan

Mendham Borough Mayor Neil Henry: "We have all been affected by mental illness in some way. Becoming Stigma-Free is the first step in fighting this disease as a community. Only by removing the perception of shame or embarrassment will we erase those feelings that prevent our neighbors, friends and family members from seeking help."

Mt. Arlington Mayor Michael Stanzilis: "We want everyone to know help is available and no one should suffer alone."

Chester Borough Mayor Janet Hoven: "Mental illness and drug abuse touch the lives of many ... in all of society. No one should feel less of a person regardless of an illness or addiction."

Lincoln Park Mayor David Runfeldt: ""The issues of dependency and mental health affect all of us in our communities one way or another. This initiative gets assistance to those who need it and acceptance to those that deserve it."

Mendham Township Committeewoman Amalia Duarte: "We want to be a welcoming

Why Asian-Americans And Pacific Islanders Don't Go To Therapy

By Ryann Tanap, From the NAMI NJ Website

I walked into my first group therapy session when I was in my early twenties. Not only was I the only Filipina-American in the room, I was the only person of color. I didn't realize it at the time, but this made me a bit more guarded than usual. I agonized over having to explain my upbringing, so I rarely participated. No one in the room could relate to my experience ... My peers in group would question my experience and try to give me advice—and while it was well-intentioned, I didn't find their advice as helpful as if it were coming from someone in my community.

Today we rededicate ourselves to this mission and support of the Stigma-Free initiative," said Deborah Visconi, President and CEO of New Bridge Medical Center, "We recognize a major barrier in accessing the care that truly makes a difference is often the fear of judgement ... Mental illness is no different than any other illness and we are dedicated to creating a safe environment where consumers can comfortably receive the quality care they need."
